

Expect Democrats To Chase Truman

By Peter Smith

WASHINGTON. — The semi-official election of President Truman's name in nomination for the 1948 presidential election caused an uproar in Washington over the weekend.

Monday looking back with more tranquility, some of the city's editorial boards before postmaster-general Robert E. Hannegan, who is also chairman of the Democratic national committee, produced a joint piece of timing. When he brought forward Mr. Truman's name for his party's candidacy in a New York speech.

The president's popularity with the American public, they point out, has never been higher. Mr. Truman has grown steadily in stature under the political adversity of the last few months, starting with his rejection of the Republican victory in last November's elections, continuing through his strong and masterly handling of the coal-strike crisis and culminating with his dignified approach to the Republican-controlled congress.

During the most unpropitious of political circumstances, Mr. Truman is generally considered to have the 1948 Democratic nomination in his hand, right now. If he wants it, and there is no real suggestion that he doesn't.

Rosemarie Becker Made Carnival Queen

Republicans Hedge On Trade Pacts

By Peter Smith

WASHINGTON. — At first sight it appeared that the Republican party had had a change of heart and was preparing to give full backing to the state department's program of securing world trade agreements through reciprocal trade agreements.

But a sharp re-examination of last week's joint statement by Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, chairman of the Foreign relations committee, and Senator Charles McNary of Oregon, chairman of the finance committee, some Washington observers came to the conclusion that nothing had changed at all.

On Friday said frankly he did not believe the projected 11-nation conference of tariff agreements, called by the state department tentatively for April in Geneva, ever would be held.

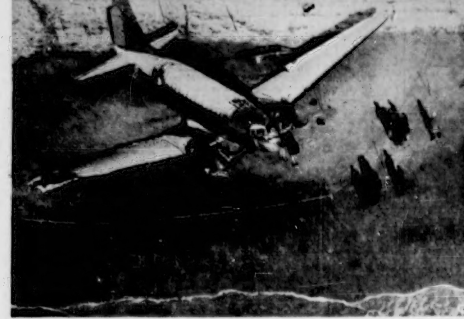

An American remarking that the Republican statement "which, among other things, advocates 'escape clauses' in trade pacts" had contained an escape clause wide enough to drive a truck through.

The statement said in effect that the Republican leadership "is opposed to any legislation which would increase the tariff-making power of congress, which would increase the tariff-making power of the executive branch, such legislation as the best tariff-making power of the party who have called for a resolution urging congress to postpone and further restriction of tariff-making power."

Mr. Truman must permit the tariff committee to review all agreements and act as a final check on the tariff-making power of the United States; he must have an "escape clause" inserted in every agreement; he must allow the tariff-making power to be exercised by the executive branch; he must make any such recommendation open to public inspection; he must limit the number of nations to which such agreements can be made.

Some observers doubt whether any satisfactory new tariff reductions could be negotiated with such a burden of conditional clauses.

In an address at the annual dinner of the Canadian Army association, Gen. Crease said compulsory military training was the only way Canada will ever possess the practical policy of consolidating its three armed services and urged a peacetime program of compulsory universal military training.

U.S. Gives Details Fast New Bomber

WASHINGTON. (AP) — The United States navy Sunday opened the door on its newest heavy patrol bomber, the Martin XPBM-1, which makes a definite mark of speed in a pair of tests. It cruises at a cruising range of more than 3,000 miles.

It is a four-engine craft which resembles a huge twin-engine plane because the jets are mounted directly behind two of the largest, 2,000-horsepower conventional engines.

Capable of cruising at more than 200 miles an hour, the bomber can boom its top speed to "well over 300 miles per hour with a flick of the jet power," the navy said.

Prices to Go Up Say Clothing To Cost More

Men's clothing prices are scheduled to go up in Edmonton in the near future, according to persistent rumors circulating in business circles today. The increases were permitted in an order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board dated Feb. 1.

ASKED if prices were due to skyrocket, retailers declared they had "nothing definite to say." Vancouver dealers have stated that men's clothing prices are "due for a boost in the near future." At the cost, retailers say eastern wholesalers have notified them that prices on worsteds would go up immediately.

Vancouver merchants said that in the past eastern wholesalers had held back on shipments when a price rise was imminent. "Retailers don't object so much to the price rise as to the way in which the operators force it on us by increasing cost of materials they sold us months previously," one coast dealer said.

THE PROBABLE rise in price of men's suits will be from $35.00 to $50.00 depending on the quality. "An official of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board in Edmonton has no comment to make. The manager of many clothing departments in several downtown business stores had no 'definite news' on the question.

Claim Legislation Inadequate Decision of Board Deferred in Dispute

Alleging lack of adequate labor legislation, the failure of labor departments to enforce existing legislation, and the growing tendency among labor leaders to ignore both regulations and contractual obligations, the M. D. Muttart Lumber Ltd., has asked that a security clause be inserted in the wage and working conditions agreement with the Amalgamated Building and Construction Workers of Canada, Local No. 4, in a brief presented to an arbitration board, appointed by the provincial industrial relations board, to adjudicate the dispute between the company and the union.

THE UNION BRIEF terms the company's demand for a clause as an attempt to amend the conciliation and arbitration act, and also an attempt to force the incorporation of unions into the agreement would widen the breach between management and workers, the brief states.

The company is seeking the inclusion of a clause which calls for the posting of a $20,000 bond guaranteeing the company against any loss, or damage, occasioned by any illegal, or sympathy strike in breach of the agreement, and also that in the event of such strike taking place, the company shall have the right to discharge any employee who may take part in it.

THE COMPANY's brief asserts that lack of adequate labor legislation has left employers vulnerable to any improper union practices, such as the repudiation of bargaining agreements and the calling of strikes where there is no dispute with the employer.

It is asserted also in the brief that governmental authorities have failed to enforce either to provide adequate statutory remedies, or to enforce the penalties which do exist.

The union's brief points out that the M. D. Muttart Lumber Ltd. is a small firm certified for a number of workers less than 100, which has stepped out of line from the hundreds of employers who, for years have negotiated agreements with their employees.

Finds Gas Leak "Sure Fire" Way

The use of a method of finding a leak in a gas line was tried about 10:40 p.m. Sunday. This time by Thomas Stigpenko, proprietor of a rooming house at 1009 37 street. Mr. Stigpenko used a lighted match in an effort to find the leak after a roomer reported a strong odor of gas in the premises.

He found the faulty spot in the line but with most unfortunate results. An explosion took place which rocked the whole house, and startled most of the 28 tenants. Mr. Stigpenko escaped unscathed, but the house caught fire. It was necessary for firemen from hall two and five, under District Chief Thomas Herby, to respond to the call.

Slight damage was done to a small portion of the floor in one room, and the bathroom floor was broken up by the explosion.

Premier Attends Chicago Parley

In Canadian Legion Resolution

Three Governments Urged Share Education Costs
Resolutions urging the Dominion, provincial and municipal governments to each assume one-third of education costs in the province were passed at a meeting of the Strathcona branch No. 156, Canadian Legion, 1251, Sunday.

Alan Hamilton, vice-president, was chairman in the absence of Dave Roberts, president.

THE RESOLUTION AROSE out of a letter sent them by the Alberta Educational Conference Council, urging endorsement of a council resolution whereby the provincial government will be urged to assume 30 per cent of educational costs in the province.

The Legion resolution differed from the council resolution and urged costs to be assumed by the provincial, Dominion and municipal governments in equal proportion.

Considerable discussion took place on immigration, and it was decided to write to the provincial government asking their stand before any resolutions or action would be passed by the branch.

The new Memorial Hall was also discussed. It is hoped that work on its construction will start this year.

New Vote Must Be Held Labor Council Election Void

The election of 1947 officers of the Trades and Labor Council has been declared null and void by Percy Bengough, president of the Trades Congress of Canada, on the ground that delegates of unions not affiliated with the national body were permitted vote in the election. It was learned here Monday.

THE COMMUNICATION voiding the election states that a new one must be held, at which only properly accredited delegates can participate in the voting.

The officers unseated are Tom Speer, president; Charles Gilbreath, vice-president; John Wallis, secretary; J. Peetz, sergeant-at-arms; and A. F. Mann, J. Flower and Dave Kerr, members of the board of trustees.

It is understood that delegates from the Packing House and Meat Canners Union, local 103, were seated as delegates and permitted to vote although no affiliation with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

IT IS CLAIMED also by certain delegates of the Edmonton Trades and Labor Council that the 1946 election of officers should be voided as delegates from this union also were permitted to vote in the election.

No date has been set for the election ordered by President Bengough.

COMPLETE AERIAL TRIP: Mrs. M. J. Crawshaw of Spirit River is a real modern. At the age of 74 she took her first flight in an airplane but it was a real one. Last May she flew from Grande Prairie to Edmonton by C.P. Air Lines and then proceeded by way of Trans-Canada Air Lines to Montreal where she boarded a TCA plane for Prestwick, Scotland. Now she has completed her long aerial voyage home and is shown in the above picture alighting from a TCA air liner at Edmonton airport. A resident of Canada for 10 years, Mrs. Crawshaw was paying a visit to brothers and a sister in England. She was delighted with the flight over the ocean and back. The stewardess is Miss Margaret McNaught.

After April 1 Next Year May End Taxicab Restrictions

Restriction of taxicab licenses considered by granting of licenses to R. E. Cousins, and J. H. Kwak, who are veterans, to operate a tax service in the Garneau district.

THEIR APPLICATION is accompanied by petitions from Dr. D. R. Easton, and 21 others, and also from C. H. Holgate and 92 other staff members, and patients in the Col. Mearns Pavilion.

IN THEIR REPORT to council, the commissioners state that "it is generally understood that one of the reasons for the restriction of taxicab licenses has been a desire to protect the investment of ex-servicemen, who may have utilized their gratuities and service credits to establish themselves in business."

THEY RECOMMEND that as of April 1, 1948, city council terminate any restriction on the issue of taxicab licenses, leaving control, as formerly, to the licensing highway traffic board, city police, and the license inspector.

THEY ALSO RECOMMEND that the distribution of the taxicab licenses be made available in the number of licenses to 150.

Council also will be asked to consider the application of Mrs. M. J. Crawshaw, who is a resident of Spirit River, to operate a tax service in the Garneau district.

Wisecracking Down to Rio

Bob and Bing are Off Again on Merry Road

By Allie Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 10. (BUP) - Bob Hope and Bing Crosby are back on the road again, but this time they're down on their hands and knees shining up every inch of it.

It's the "Road to Rio," and Mosera. Hope and Crosby are taking no chances that it'll look like a couple of other road show movie fans.

"We've got our own dough in it this time," explained Hope. "We can't risk a chance on the public walking out."

So the scenery for this "Road" is gonna be different. No wisecracking camels nor talking fish. No mountains that light up with a glare of music and sultry for the first time since her South Sea Island days.

"THE ONLY SIMILARITY to other 'Road' pictures, living or dead," Hope, "will be a tricky ending. But we're not telling that to anyone. Can't afford to lose any theatre admissions."

Everytime Bob and Bing do a "Road" movie they swear it will be their last. No more travel, they announced after "The Road to Zanzibar." We're staying home, they insisted after the Road to Rio. But the Paramount sign, even brother, they chorused after "The Road to Utopia."

Dorothy Lamour looked at the "Road" box office score and nudged Hope and Crosby gently in their wallets. A share in the picture, she and guaranteed hit serial tossed in.

BING AND BOB, veteran investors in baseball clubs and race horses, know a good deal when they see one. So they're off on the road again.

This time they're playing smart. Neither will predict if this road will be the finale.

"If we hear of another road we haven't been on I suppose we'll make a movie about it," grinned Hope.

In this "Road" Hope and Crosby are two entertainers, named Scat and Hot Lips, who stow away on a boat to Rio. They cram Lamour into a cot and smuggle her into a suite they tricked out of a hotel manager.

"EVERYTIME I MUFF a line Bob hovers. 'Hey, remember, this is our money in the picture,' she said. She laughingly refrains from pointing out that between Hope's radio show and Crosby's golf tournament the picture is a couple of weeks behind schedule.

For instance, in the scene we watched Bob and Bing were supposed to walk into their hotel room and tip the bellhop. Instead, Bob quipped "What's this, another job?" and Bing came back with, "There's better be a fire escape."

But the Paramount sign, even brother, they chorused after "The Road to Utopia."

"We think up our best gags before the cameras," Hope explained. "So after a scene the script girl goes to an oxygen tent and the writers look for another job."

"What's this, another job?" and Bing came back with, "There's better be a fire escape."

Students Over 60 Take Up Theology

BOSTON. (BUP) - Two elderly students - a retired school teacher and printing firm president - will complete their training at the Boston University School of Theology this June and embark on preaching careers.

They are Joshua Perry, 68, of Slagle, La., and Hessel W. Beach of Cambridge, a 62-year-old printer.

Perry taught in one-room schoolhouses in Louisiana, while Beach has been in the printing business 40 years.

Perry plans to return to Louisiana on completion of his studies, be ordained and then travel the state as a preacher. Beach already has been named minister of the First Presbyterian Church in Birmingham, Ala., and will devote full time to this post in graduation.

Scientists Probe Meistrons

Atomic Energy Greater Than Bomb Is Studied

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. (BUP) - Cosmic ray researchers cleared away a little of the mystery surrounding a kind of atomic energy release far greater than that of the atomic bomb.

Studies made aboard a B-29 flying laboratory in a series of long-range flights last summer disclosed, they said, the percentage of the neutron, fission's most penetrating charged particle of matter known to physics.

Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, and Dr. W. F. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Research Foundation at Swarthmore, Pa., jointly announced results of the B-29 studies.

IT HAD BEEN KNOWN that meistrons were formed when cosmic rays from outer space entered the earth's atmosphere. These rays, Grosvenor and Swann said, "represent a release of atomic energy far greater than the energy used in atomic bombs, though so far this power cannot be harnessed."

What science wanted to know was the nature of the primary particle which in flight through the atmosphere, transformed after the manner in which it collided into meistrons. A meistron, though capable of penetrating 75 feet of lead, lives less than one-thousandth of a second after it is formed.

THE FATHER of this short-lived but mighty subatomic bit of matter, Swann said, is a proton. It is the positively charged nucleus of an atom of hydrogen, the substance from which the sun and stars derive their nuclear energy. All nuclei of atoms heavier than hydrogen consist of protons and neutrons.

Last summer's research the superheated laboratory made flights between southern Canada and the magnetic equator over northern Chile. It flew at altitudes ranging from one to more than six miles.

The army air force participated in the research because it wanted to find out what effect cosmic rays have on electronic equipment and the materials used in guided missiles.

THE GROSVENOR, Swann reported learned in this respect. But the civilian researcher said, learned that individual protons streaming from space produce 10 meistrons at a time.

If man could duplicate this process, he would have an energy source beside which the atomic bomb would seem puny.

At University Course Planned On Co-operation

Plans and arrangements are being made for a course and conference on co-operation to be held Feb. 19, 20, 21, which opens on the first day at St. Stephen's auditorium of the university. It was announced Saturday by officials in charge.

THE COURSE, attended by large numbers of students, will be under the direction of the department of extension, University of Alberta, and the provincial committee on co-operative education.

A list of the widespread interest shown throughout the west in development of co-operative economy, the course will be devoted to an intensive and practical discussion of principles, practice and management of the various co-operative organizations of the province.

THIS WILL INCLUDE study of the problems which affect the general welfare of agriculture, and an attempt will be made to stress the opportunities and responsibilities of co-operative organizations in the economic and social life of the community and country.

Officials point out that the course provides an opportunity of definite educational value, and they urge good attendance particularly of officials, managers and employees of co-operative organizations.

AMONG THE MANY subjects to be discussed by authorities will be the knotty problem brought about by the imposition of taxation on co-operative last year. Discouraged on this point will be shared by Robert Milliken, Regina, counsel for Saskatchewan Co-operative Producers, and A. B. MacDonald, Ottawa, secretary of the Co-operative Union of Canada.

Lad Gets Loose In Delicatessen MELWYN, Wis. (BUP) - Back in 1944, Victor Eversman used to gaze hungrily in the window of the delicatessen store owned by Roland Wason.

Wason, who liked youngsters pretty well, told the seven-year-old lad that when meat and other delicacies became scarce in part, he would treat him to a real feast in the store window. Recently, Wason, a man of his word, paid off.

The youngster climbed in the window and fell to.

Explorers Held Up at Finlay Forks

Nahanni Valley Party Battered By 40-Mile Gale

EXCLUSIVE

This is the fifth in a series of articles presented exclusively by THE EDMONTON BULLETIN from Pierre Berton, who, with other members of The Vancouver Sun's exploration party, has set out to reveal the secrets of the South Nahanni Valley.

WITH THE HEADLESS VALLEY EXPEDITION, FINLAY FORKS, Feb. 10 — We battled a 40-mile-an-hour blizzard into this trading post at the headwaters of the Peace River and our plane bumped savagely on the rocky ice of the Finlay River.

The thermometer stood 20 below, but the knife-edged wind made it seem more like 50.

Our fine, needle points of the snow, which hacked at us the face, we left the aircraft, piled up against our plane and we were stranded here until the wind abated.

"Looks like a Peace River blow," said Pilot Russ Baker. "The last time this happened the drifts covered the plane. It took four men working with shovels all day to dig her out."

It was the second set-back in our struggle to reach the legendary Headless Valley of the South Nahanni River.

Everybody Wants to Go

With the elements giving us a tooth-and-nail battle, we were still hundreds of miles short of our objective. The valley is farther north than we thought — on the same parallel of latitude as Anchorage, Alaska; Great Slave Lake; Oslo, Norway; Helsinki, Finland, and Leningrad, Russia.

The men and women who map the lonely outpost of northern part of the province are frankly amazed that we are undertaking the trip. Most of them pool-pool the Nahanni legend, but they all ask to go along "because it would be mighty interesting to find out the truth."

At Fort St. James we picked up Ed Hanratty, the mechanic, who will aid Pilot Russ Baker over the tough spots of the journey.

We also checked the short wave radio and took on a raft of provisions, enough to last us a month if we are grounded in the Nahanni country.

We will work into the Nahanni out of Fort Laird and Indians there will be asked to come out by snowshoe and dog team if we do not return in seven days.

Treacherous Ice Landing

Our main worry is the treacherous ice of the Nahanni River and the reports have not been good about its thinness. Hot springs and chinook winds are said to keep it rotten in many spots.

Russ Baker intends to land on a fairly shallow part of the river.

On board the plane are two empty oil drums and a heavy-duty jack.

"If we go through the ice, I think we can jack the plane up okay," says Baker, keeping his fingers crossed.

Although Finlay Forks is on the map in big print there are actually only two families living here: Roy McDougall, trapper, and Paul Vatcher, the Dominion telegraph agent who is doing his best to get my copy through.

Vatcher is postmaster, weather observer, sub-mining recorder and observer for Department of Mines and Resources as well.

We are well above the ration line now in the land of canned butter, Coleman lamps, outdoor plumbing and moose meat.

We ate great slabs of moose meat in the McDougall's cabin while the blizzard outside increased its intensity.

As the evening wore on the chances of getting an early start for Fort Nelson faded.

But nobody in this country worries too much about being stranded.

"We got lots of grub and lots of beds," said Roy McDougall. "When a Peace River blow comes up, all you can do is eat and sleep and let 'er blow."

Bacon Fat Thrown Away, Eh?

Wait Till Mrs. Vatcher Gets Home Again, Paul!

Telegrapher Paul Vatcher of Finlay Forks has been indulging in good old northern hospitality towards The Vancouver Sun's Nahanni Valley expedition. But he went too far when he threw away the bacon fat.

Mrs. Vatcher, who leaves Vancouver today to fly home (she was going away), explained that reporter Pierre Berton's story of tossing bacon fat into the fire, frying eggs and "everything" in butter, is really the old story of men at large in the kitchen.

"Like all the women in the north, I certainly use all my bacon fat," she said. "Perhaps we use a little more butter than you rationed folk, but we do all our own baking and make our own bread. We can't get any shortening, so they let us have a little more butter."

But not enough for "inch-thick" coatings on bread, another example of hubby at large among the rations.

The Vatchers use about a pound of butter a week. "I'm annoyed at Paul for throwing out the bacon fat," she confessed, "because we actually ration ourselves every day on all food."

"But I guess Paul was giving the boys a treat. I wonder if there's going to be anything left when I get home."

"When you entertain in the north you put everything on the table, then go easy yourself afterwards."

EXCLUSIVE

This is the fourth in a series of articles presented exclusively by THE EDMONTON BULLETIN from Pierre Berton, who, with other members of The Vancouver Sun's exploration party, has set out to reveal the secrets of the South Nahanni Valley.

WITH THE HEADLESS VALLEY EXPEDITION, FINLAY FORKS, Feb. 10 — This is the country where they spread butter on home-made bread in inch-thick slabs and where the eggs are the color of the setting sun.

We have left the boundaries of rationing and are now in the free, untrifled land where they buy butter by the hundredweight, bacon by the stone and sugar by the sack.

I helped Paul Vatcher, the telegraph agent who gets my copy through to Vancouver, fry a mors of eggs. The pan was brimming with fresh bacon fat and I asked Paul where to put it.

Shelves of Chocolate Bars

"Toss it in the fire," he told me. "We never save that stuff."

"Better save a bit for the eggs," I said.

"No need to," said Paul. "Here, we fry everything in butter."

In the well stocked larders of Finlay Forks and the other isolated outposts of the north country there are shelves full of chocolate bars and cases of canned milk.

Rationing would be useless, for there is no place you can run to daily, coupons in hand.

An entire winter's food supply is ordered in the summer when it is freighted in by river boat.

1½-Ton Grocery Order

Paul Vatcher and his wife ordered a ton and a half of grub for themselves last summer.

Fruit, vegetables and other perishables are ordered late in the fall when they can be kept by freezing. Eggs are kept in waterglass and are a good deep orange.

On the plane that comes in nine times a year are beefsteaks, yeast and tomatoes, ordered by the trappers and settlers in the area.

It's strictly a matter of planning and the wise housewife charts her winter's menu with mathematical precision, for food is the No. 1 item in a country where there's precious little else to do in the winter except eat.

A LONG WAIT: With railroads blocked by one of the worst snow storms in recent years around Milwaukee, these girls are in for a pretty long wait. But it doesn't seem to worry them. They made themselves comfortable and slept in the station.

Elizabeth Woodward Says . . .

Dear Miss Woodward: I'm deeply in love with a boy, and he seems to share my feelings. He has told me many times that he desires the companionship of no other girl but me. That much is okay. But how can I make him see that life is too short and sweet to spend so much of his time doing unimportant

You're in love. So you think the rains have stopped, the moon shines brightly all day, and the waterfalls have been taken to flowing upward. And of course, he should divorce his family. But, since he's around his house over at yours ... is just a waste of time ... Going places with his family ... running errands ... living with his folks ... all of that is out of the question. He should be just living for you! Well when a girl's in love, it's the most important thing in the world for her. But to a boy it's just the frosting on the cake. It's not the whole of life . . . It's just one of the things that make life fun. Your boy friend probably sees you as often as he can . . . and wants to. You're being piggyish if you won't settle for that!

Dear Miss Woodwards: "Miss, how friend is very nice—and I do think he rather likes me. We've been stepping out together for the past eight months, the last two really steady. Lately he told me he couldn't take me out three nights of the week-end only two—Saturdays and Sunday. Not enough allowance, he said. But on Fridays he goes out with the boys to dances. When he goes out with the boys he spends just as much as he would if he took me out. I think if he doesn't go, he's home.
